

- Full name: Tsung-Kuang Yeh
- Affiliation: Department of Engineering and System Science, National Tsing Hua University
- Title/Position within the institution: Distinguished Professor
- Brief biographical introduction

Prof. Tsung-Kuang Yeh received his PhD degree in 1994 from Department of Nuclear Engineering at Penn State University in the US. He is now a distinguished professor at Department of Engineering and System Science of National Tsing Hua University in Taiwan. Prof. Yeh's expertise is in corrosion of alloys, water chemistry, reactor safety and structural integrity of nuclear power plants. He has been monitoring and evaluating energy security and electricity supply in Taiwan for more than 10 years and is frequently interviewed by local and international news agencies. In addition, Prof. Yeh has published more than 230 energy-related commentary articles in local news media and has attended quite a number of live or recorded commentary TV programs.